UNINCORPORATED CITIES AND TOWNS OF CALIFORNIA

(COMPILED IN COOPERATION WITH THE CALIFORNIA STATE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE)

The following list of UNINCORPORATED cities, towns, or villages in California, together with latest available unofficial estimates of their permanent resident population, was assembled from available map and postal guide publications, local chamber of commerce publications, and the population survey made by the United States Department of Agriculture, Bureau of Agricultural Economics, Division of Land Economics. The latter, together with 1940 Census reports of population by judicial townships and special census taken since, were used as a basis for checking later estimates from other sources.

Since these unincorporated towns have no definite boundaries, the Bureau of Census does not report their population. Estimates of their population from various unofficial sources vary considerably. Some are limited to the actual town subdivision. Others include the rural areas around the town, in some cases up to the limits of the judicial township of which it may be the center.

In the resort towns, most estimates are based on year-round residents, but a few probably include summer residents. In towns where institutions are located, their population is in most cases excluded. Therefore, the following estimates, although checked as carefully as possible, cannot be guaranteed either as to their accuracy or their comparability.
